PIEDMONT

Piedmont is the crown jewel of Italian winemaking. Protected on the north by the Alps and on the south and west by the Maritime Alps, over which the sea still sends its breath, Piedmont boasts some of Italy's most highly prized vineyards, those of Barolo and Barbaresco. Piedmont is red wine country for the most part, but even the white wines produced here, are stellar.

LOMBARDY

The home of risotto, terrific wines - but one must work hard to find it. Wine in Lombardy is astonishingly diverse. The Alpine Nebbiolo, benefits from the bright sun exposure, producing wines notably lighter than their Piedmontese cousins.

FRIULI VENEZIA GIULIA

Friuli has a distinct and well-defined local winemaking tradition, especially along the south-eastern border. This took its modern form in the 1970s, when winemaker Mario Schiopetto introduced stainless steel fermentation and began producing severe white wines whose crisp minerality could cut glass. Nowadays, if anything truly defines the winemaking of Friuli, it is the spirit of innovation, experimentation and a harmonious diversity of styles.

TRENTINO ALTO ADIGE

The hills are alive. Trentino – Alto Adige benefits from the protection of the surrounding mountains, which both shelter and warm the valley. It's not unusual for small producers to harvest grapes with a 1,000-meter difference between their lowest-and highest-altitude vineyards.

At its best, Brunello di Montalcino is an expressive, full-bodied, and complex wine, full of red cherry, leather, and tobacco flavours. Though the wines are rich in colour, they should not be too dark. Rule of thumb: "You should be able to read the pink-tinged Gazzetta dello Sport through a glass of Brunello."

LAZIO

Lazio is a region in central Italy, and home to the ancient capital city of Rome. The region's reputation is mainly based on its white wines, the mainstay grape varieties being Trebbiano. The most famous white wine throughout history was Frascati, a wine to be drunk in company in traditional taverns. Today this territory has evolved as some winemakers have invested time and hard work, with surprising results.

CAMPANIA

From the breathtaking Amalfi Coast to the coastal Sorrento, Campania is home to some of Italy's greatest grapes. Unique as the beauty of the landscape, is also the diversity of the vineyards and so, of the wines: the palette reaches from fruity to powerful, from mineral to opulent and that with white and red.

Surprisingly is above all the white wines, whose grapes are partly in heights grown from 700 to 800 meters and which is often given a long life by the acidity and minerality.

ABRUZZO

A small region in central Italy, nestled between the Apennine Mountains and the Adriatic Sea. Located in the middle of Abruzzo, Guardia Grele is a picturesque village where the hills are covered in sunflower fields, and the rhythm of life is shaped by nature's abundance. With direct access to the sea and a landscape bathed in sunlight, it sits at the heart of a region often described as blessed by the gods. Life here is defined by the luxury of daily simplicity. Though Abruzzo is almost a non-entity in the world of wine, it harbours quiet potential.

PUGLIA

Boasting a decadent variety of fruits and vegetables, the Puglia Region is enchanted with vast space that olive groves, vineyards and truly reside. Generations pass down the tradition of handmade pasta for centuries, and Romans influenced cultivation techniques for the primitivo and negroamoro to give the wines fruity notes for easy-drinking.

MOLISE

Although Molise is Italy's youngest and lesser-known region, it is also home to some of Italy's oldest wine and food traditions. Nestled between the Apennines and the Adriatic Sea, the region, like so many in Italy, is made up of many Roman ruins and medieval churches. One grape present at the time of the Romans was Aglianico, grown in these mountains.

SARDEGNA

Located in the Mediterranean Sea, picturesque beaches and beautiful landscapes surrounds Sardinia. The Mediterranean climate and mountainous landscapes give native food and wines complexity, from an expansive range of grapes for wines resulting in unique characteristics, to traditionally fished tuna, and suckling pig that invokes warmth and comfort.

SICILIA

"To have seen Italy without having seen Sicily is not to have seen Italy at all". Sicily is wild, inspiring, and energetic. The island is dominated by Mount Etna on the eastern coast and in terms of wine, there is no more exciting ground. The volcanic soils give undeniable mineral sensations, lending depth and complexity to the wines.
